Hidalgo County schedules first community COVID-19 vaccine clinic targeting healthcare workers, elderly

EDINBURG — Hidalgo County has scheduled its first community vaccine clinic to provide COVID-19 vaccinations to healthcare workers and the elderly, Hidalgo County Judge Richard F. Cortez said Wednesday.

The clinic will be held in the city of Mercedes at the Rio Grande Valley Livestock Show Grounds, at 1000 N. Texas Ave. Officials will begin administering the Moderna vaccinations on Tuesday, January 5, beginning at 8 a.m. on a first come, first served basis. Since there is still a limited number of doses available, the clinic will run until vaccinations are depleted.

"Hopefully, this marks the beginning of the end of this terrible pandemic," Judge Cortez said. "While local hospitals and some medical clinics have been working diligently to vaccinate people, this is the first opportunity for people in the community to receive the vaccines."

Cortez said as more vaccines become available in Hidalgo County, the pool of those eligible to receive vaccinations will continue to expand.

Hidalgo County will be following state protocol that targets healthcare workers. These workers will be asked to provide proof that they are in the healthcare industry.

The state protocol and Tuesday's clinic also targets anyone born before 1955 and are now 65 years or older. In addition, people aged 18 and older with certain medical conditions are eligible to be vaccinated with the advice of their doctors.

More information, including a form that can be prefilled, is available on the Hidalgo County website at www.hidalgocounty.us.
